The bottom dropped out of a case in of the ruling of the court that in order to show the value of a dog the fact must first be established that there was a market and a market price. The party whose dog had been slain was able to prove that there was a market for some kinds of dogs, but not of the kind that he had.

Is the City Jail to be a Loaflog Place For Prestitutes?

A disgusting but by no means unusual sight was presented at the city jail yesterday. One of the most brazen women of the street was hanging about the office for a half hour or more, chatting with the officials in a free and easy way, and exchanging vulgarities. It was no doubt funny for the prostitute and for the officials, but it was disgusting to even the newspaper men, who in gathering up all sorts of items from all sorts of people hear enough hard talk to harden their block from the police headquarters, and from the court, talking with a nowith the star of the night, helped herself to a clgar from the policeman's pocket. Such are mere instances of the apparent familiarity which exists between some of the most notorious characters in the city, and some of the supposed preservers of the peace. It has a common that the city jatl office is turned into a loafing place for such characters, and for the carrying on of an interchange of vulgarities of speech and jokes, between prostitutes and officers, it is time that a reform was instituted.
